To whom it may conern:

I understand that there is a concern about the leverage utilized during forex trading. As a sole, day trader, this leverage provides the opportunity for most traders, who are not affiliated with any large corporation, an opportunity to properly leverage ourselves against the larger institutions which seem to have the ability to push the market in certain directions.

In addition, we fully accept and maintain responsibility for the risk that we may take while making trades. Unlike Bernie, I do not risk outside parties in my trades. It solely falls upon my own assets. I guarantee with the creation of internet trading, that most traders are like myself, trying to maintain access to the trading world my using those leverages for our advantage against the larger firms. I would appreciate you considering my thoughts in maintaining current leveraging as it stands and not to make any changes.
