Subject: Regulation of Retail Forex

RE: RIN 3038-AC61

I am writing to encourage you to allow individual traders to determine the appropriate leverage for their own personal Forex trading style. I am an investor in the Forex market, and I derive a portion of my income from actively trading. Lowering the available leverage would seriously impair my ability to trade Forex and as a result, would damage my income. I believe in a fair, free marketplace where individuals determine the risk level they are willing to tolerate in order to accomplish their personal objectives. I also believe unnecessary regulation puts US companies at a disadvantage to foreign based brokers. Please do not enact a reduction in available leverage to retail Forex traders. Thank you.
